THIS Company is formed for the purpose of supplying what has long been urgently required, and which, from the increased and constantly increasing growth of our Commerce, is daily becoming more and more necessary; viz., regular, speedy, and safe communication along the extensive line of coast and in the inner waters of China.

For conducting an immense Coasting trade, the Chinese possess nothing but unwieldy Junks, which are unable to perform their voyages except with the favorable monsoon; while European commerce, in the China waters, is carried on by sailing vessels, with the addition recently, of a very limited number of steamers owned by private firms; the postal and general passenger traffic being confined to the semi-monthly service of the Peninsular and Oriental Company between Hongkong and Shanghai.

To meet the necessities of both Foreign and Native trade it is proposed to construct a fleet of steamers, which shall be the means of establishing regular communication between the ports and places to which foreigners will have access, and of providing for the conveyance of passengers, mails, and general merchandize.

It is intended to commence with the construction of Six Steam-vessels, as the Directors propose to limit the operations of the Company until experience has proved in what way they can be best extended with advantage to the Shareholders.

Power (under the control of the Shareholders in General Meeting) will be taken by the Deed for a future increase of Capital; and provision will be made for the extension of the Company's operations between China and Japan, as found expedient.

The extent of the trade already existing—its certain expansion—and the manifest necessity for the use of steam—warrant the conclusion that the Company may rely upon being able to find ready employment for the vessels at a scale of charges that will make the profits ample.

Applications for shares to be made to Messrs. W. R. ADAMSON & Co., who have been appointed Agents in China and Japan.

With reference to the foregoing, the Undersigned have received advice that the first portion of the Fleet will be despatched from England in March, consisting of—

A powerful Screw Steamer, 663 Tons, draft when loaded 10 feet.

A powerful Paddle-wheel Steamer, 663 Tons, draft when loaded 10 feet.

A Tug Boat, 220 Tons, draft when loaded 6 feet.

A small Steamer adapted for River Service.

THE Trustees of the Marquess of Bute are now erecting, on the Northern Quay of the East Dock at Cardiff, an extensive Fire-proof Free and Bonded Warehouse, which will be completed in the course of the Autumn. The building is of a sufficient capacity to contain several entire Cargoes; and admitting as it does upon the water of the Dock, every facility will be offered for lifting goods directly from or into the vessels discharging or loading in the Dock. The position being contiguous to and in connection with the various Railways leading from the Docks to the Mineral Districts of South Wales, and hence through the entire system of Railways throughout the Kingdom, will afford all the means requisite for the importation of valuable goods, and for their convenient transmission Inland.

This will, no doubt, lead speedily to the establishment of an import trade commensurate with the large and rapidly increasing population of the town and neighbourhood of Cardiff, and the immense Mineral Districts of which it is the Port. This vast population is at present principally supplied with Foreign Merchandize from Bristol, but it is evident that direct importations are much called for; nor need these be circumscribed to the supply of the local demand, as they may well be extended to the whole of the Manufacturing Districts of England, with which already direct communication exists.

Vessels employed in such trade will have the further advantage of discharging their cargoes in a loading port, the best in the Bristol Channel, where the Dock and other charges are very moderate, and we believe lower than those in any other Port in that part of the Kingdom, and where, from the constant demand for tonnage Cargoes, outward freights may always be obtained without detention.

Within the comparatively short period of twenty years, during which these great works have been constructed and opened by the late Marquess of Bute, and his Trustees since his death, Cardiff has risen from its very inferior position as a Port to that of one of the most important in the country. There are two walled Docks, enclosing a water space of sixty-seven acres, one of which has a uniform depth throughout of twenty-five feet; its width, for the greater portion of its extent, being 500 feet, and the width of the sea gates, 55 feet. The dimensions of the other Dock are somewhat less. There is in addition a Tidal Harbour, constructed to receive vessels engaged in the coasting trade. The Docks and Harbour are provided with 30 Coal Shipping Staiths, the whole on the most approved plans, for loading Cargoes in the most perfect condition. The rapidity with which this can be judged of by the fact that a screw steam ship, carrying about 1,600 tons of coals, has been frequently loaded in the short space of nine hours, so that from the time of her entrance into the Dock to her leaving it, not more than twelve hours were occupied; while, at the Tidal Harbour, a small screw collier entered, taken in her Cargo, and departs within 2½ hours. There are three Graving Docks, two of which will admit the largest class of vessels; one being 400 feet in length.

There is also a large Gridiron, where vessels may be placed with the greatest facility, for the examination, cleaning, and repairing of their hulls.

There have also been erected Shear-legs, 70 feet high, for lifting weights up to 60 tons at one lift, and by which also the masts of Vessels can be lifted out and replaced.

A Steam Crane is proved, by which the vessels of line build can at the same time discharge their ballast and receive their Cargoes. Several other Cranes, of various lifting power, are distributed upon the different Quays around the Docks; and one of the Railway Companies possesses two other Steam Cranes used for the discharge of ballast from Vessels.

In the year 1860, the exports of house and steam coal from these Docks and Tidal Harbour were 1,773,181 tons, and of Iron, 212,054 tons. In that year the number of vessels that cleared Foreign and Coastwise from the Docks and Harbour was 8,115, and their registered tonnage amounted to 1,930,929; and it is estimated that the total exports and imports at the Port of Cardiff during that year reached the large number of Two and three-quarters Millions of Tuns. It is to be expected that these large figures will rapidly increase, from the superior qualities for marine purposes of several seams of Smokeless Steam Coal found in this neighbourhood alone, and whose highly evaporative power has caused for it a great demand, not only from our own and Foreign Governments, but also from most of the great Mercantile Companies trading from this Port of this Kingdom, such as the Peninsular and Oriental, the Royal Mail, and the Cunard Companies.

The above particulars may serve to make it clear that the Port of Cardiff, by means of these Docks and their extensive and valuable adjuncts, offers peculiar advantages. Not only, as has been shewn, does there already exist a very large trade in Exports, but there are also the means for carrying on an equally large trade in Imports. Merchants and others interested in Ship-building, in Manufactures, or in the exporting or importing of goods, will find ample facilities for business; and Sites can easily be obtained on moderate terms, in the immediate vicinity of the Docks and Railways for the necessary establishments to any extent that may be desired; and it is not to be doubted that such enterprises in connection with this Port, would soon lead to highly remunerative and important results.

THE London Mail of 10th Jan., due in Hongkong on the 24th inst., and here on March 1. It was received last year on March 4, per Ly-ee-moon.

THE P. & O. Co.'s steamer with the Mail for Europe is appointed to leave on Friday, the 7th proximo.

WE are a motley community in this Foreign Settlement of Shanghai. Independent of the Chinese element—which forms at least twenty to one of the foreign population—there is perhaps no spot in the world where the interests and opinions of the residents are so various, the representatives of western governments so numerous, and the subjects of those nations so few, yet so influential. Here we are numbering only a few thousands of foreign residents, and yet we comprise English, French, German, Netherlanders, Italians, Portuguese, Spaniards, Parsees from India, people from Manila and so on. Amongst this olla podrida, it cannot be expected that general unanimity could prevail on topics enlisting the sympathies of national feeling. The old world prejudices exist here, as they do elsewhere, and strong opinions are given frequently upon the acts of their rulers towards each other, during these belligerent times in the western hemisphere. But these jealousies are tempered down when our small body politic is threatened with danger from local insurrectionists, such as the Taiping rebels. The Volunteer movement which has been so successful, indicates at once the commendable spirit which animates the community; and if we are not mistaken it has united in the bonds of fraternization men of opposite opinions and national sympathies who would otherwise have continued to hold strong national prejudices towards each other. The sacrifice of time and means by the gentlemen of this Settlement—from the heads of our wealthy firms down to the humblest clerks—to render the Volunteer Corps strong and efficient, is the most creditable movement which has occurred in its brief but eventful annals. It is thus in times of danger from without, that wise men drop all petty differences to unite in protecting their hearths and homes.

Nor must we omit to mention in conjunction with this enrolment of a civil protective force, the increase of our Municipal police, and the prompt election of a Committee of Public Safety to erect defensive works for the further protection of the Settlement from aggression. The construction of these works have had a most salutary effect upon the population within the barriers, and, doubtless, on the marauders beyond. Weak minds deficient in argument, may cavil at those precautions taken to resist the incursions of the miscreants who are now threatening the safety of Shanghai city and Settlement, but sensible men will applaud them. Rowdies who have nothing to lose, will look with chagrin upon the comparative safety of that property they would like to see in the hands of these revolutionists; but respectable men possessed of the smallest possible means, of whatever country, will give the greatest credit to those who have come forward, as the men for the occasion, to strengthen this our "City of Refuge," where not only their individual property is at stake, but that of foreigners at a distance, besides an immense amount of wealth belonging to Chinese residents. So far then the foreign community have done their duty to themselves and the world at large, who are interested in the prosperity of Shanghai.

While the civil authorities have been thus active in defending the inner portion of the Settlement the British and French naval and military forces have been guarding the outer defences, and garrisoning the city gates. It gave unqualified satisfaction to the friends of law and order to find that the Allied powers had determined to defend the city, as well as the Settlement from the ruthless Taipings. This was the first step towards nullifying the neutrality-clause of the Treaty of Tientsin, which could never have been meant to apply to such cases as the present.

While thus defending the lives, property, and dwellings of the Foreign and Chinese inhabitants of Shanghai, the naval and military authorities looked with dismay upon the desolation committed by the rebels in the environs while they had the audacity to appear within view of our houses, threatening to attack us should they be prevented from capturing the city. This was too much for the non-intervention principle, so the Allied authorities resolved to checking their progress, by at least giving support to the Imperial troops in driving these insurrectionists from their strongholds in the vicinity. The second step in the proper direction was taken yesterday, when the allied expeditions proceeded to Chang-to-chao, giving both moral and physical support to the disciplined Chinese troops under Colonel Ward—who gallantly routed the rebel force with great slaughter.

Having thus stepped beyond the limits of the neutral points in the treaty, for the purpose of maintaining law and order, there is no reason why the same should not be extended to a declaration of war against these marauders, who are as much our enemies—as far as the prosperity of Shanghai is concerned—as they are the foes of the Imperialists. Our interests are so interwoven with those of the constituted Chinese authorities that we must suffer in proportion as they do, when the industrious inhabitants are ruined by the incendiarism and massacres of those bloodthirsty villains. If matters go on during the year as they have commenced, we will find the whole country for a circuit of a hundred miles laid waste by these destroyers. Shanghai would ere long be an isolated oasis in the desert of destruction. Not only would the ground remain untilled and the harvests ungarnered, but it is probable that the trade with the Silk districts would be destroyed and the mainstay of our commerce cut off. Viewing the future from this point of view, we trust that our naval and military commanders—in whom we have the greatest reliance for prudence and decision—will see fit to extend further the policy they have now adopted towards the Taiping rebels, so that not only the city and Settlement be safe, but that they will be driven from the district, thereby enabling the industrious inhabitants to return to their labours, and advance the prosperity of Shanghai.

ARRIVAL OF THE ENGLISH MAIL.

THE Ly-ee-moon arrived yesterday from Hongkong, bringing the first portion of the English Mail of December 20th, due here on the 10th inst. On the all-important American question of war with England, no decided information has come to hand. Any reply by the Federal States Government to the ultimatum of the British Cabinet had not been received on the departure of the Mail, consequently all was still a matter of conjecture as to the probable policy President Lincoln and his confidants would adopt in the emergency.

PEKING.

By the Contest from Chefoo we have dates from Peking to the 4th February. Matters were progressing favourably between the Imperial Government and the British and French Legations. The disturbed state of the provinces infested by the rebels had occupied the serious attention of the Emperor and Regent, the Prince of Kung. From the devastation committed by the insurrectionists among the farms, villages and towns, the inhabitants are to be exempt from the payment of taxes during the present year. The following is a translation of the Imperial rescript promulgating the decree:

"Of recent years the provinces of Kiangsoo, Nganhui, and Chihkiang have been overrun by bandits, and the lower classes have been scattered and have lost their all. Our deep regret [over these misfortunes] cannot be expressed. We have issued repeated orders for the remission of the taxes in monies and grain, in the hope that we might thus revive the people so distressed.

"At present these three provinces have lost towns and cities, many of which have not yet been retaken; and even if they were gradually to be recovered, the fields and cottages of the peasantry are one-half destroyed, both by soldiers and by fire, and the time of ploughing, &c., is already past. On this account our anxious concern for our Southern subjects is deep and heartfelt. Therefore with regard then to the cities and districts which have been lost in Kiangsoo, Anhwui, and Chihkiang, we order that, to spare the people's strength the taxes in money, grain, and transport rice for the next year be entirely remitted. The viceroys and governors of these provinces] must immediately print and issue copies of this rescript for general information, as it is of importance that our kindness may alike be felt. Let no indulgence be given to the under officers trifling with this, but everything be done so as to assist our expression of consideration towards the distressed [among our] people."

The following translations of a few extracts from the Peking Gazette, contain matters of interest which we will revert to in our next issue:—

The Hseang-yang-fu district in Hupei has been cleared from Nien-fei.

Shen-pao reports successes in various parts of Shan-tung.

A censor, Kao-yeh-yu, memorializes regarding the Tsai-seang, by name Pai-tsiu, who was beheaded a few years ago, on account of alleged corrupt interference in the Literary Examinations; states that the execution was illegal, and was owing to the enmity of Tsai-yuen and Twan-hwa, and requests that the Emperor will not regard it as a precedent.

An imperial decree, impressing on all the high provincial officials the necessity of recommending for promotion such of those subordinates as merit it, and promising that their doing so will be advantageous to themselves, as well as to those whom they recommend. Quoting as instances of the benefit which accrues to the Emperor, from judicious recommendations, the careers of Lô-tê-nan (who has been since killed in battle), of Chiang-chung-yuen (who was Governor of the province of An-hui, and who fell at the capture of An-ching-fu by the Rebels), of Li-su-ping (who also died on the field of battle), of Li-su-I (the younger brother of Li-su-ping, and the present Governor of An-hui), and of Liu-châng-yu, Governor of Kwang-hsi, all of whom were recommended by Tsêng-kwo-fan and Hu-leng-I (late Governor of Hupei); and many others, including Chang-kwo-leang, who was recommended by Lao-tsung-kwang, the present Governor-General of the two Kwangs.

The censor, Chung-pei-hsien, and Sun-tsei, memorialize to the effect, that the forged testament of the Emperor Hien-fung and the false decrees—including that in reply to Tung-yuen-shun's memorial, issued by Su-shun, Tsai-yuen, &c.,—should be obliterated from the archives of the Empire. The Emperor replies that they cannot be cancelled, but that the fact of their being forged will be noted upon them.

A censor, Tsão-téng-yung, accuses Tân-ting-hsiang, the Governor of Shan-tung, of extorting money from the people, and of retiring with his mistress to a country-seat on the approach of the Rebels, and of then wasting his time in sensual pleasures. The Emperor having directed Sêng-wang (Seng-ko-lin-sin) to investigate the case, he reports that the country-seat in question is but a short way from the city (Chi-nan-fu), that Tan-ting-hsiang retired there, in order to superintend certain military operations, and that he was not accompanied by his mistress.

An imperial decree complaining of the general laxity of the high dignitaries of the Empire and stating that the sole recommendation of the men whom they bring before the Emperor's notice is that they are willing to cringe and flatter, that upright and independent men are intentionally passed over, but that as a proof that unassuming merit can still reach the Imperial ear, the Prefect of Tientsin is promoted to the Shun-tien district. The censor San-yuen-shun is promoted.

A certain Ch'eng-ying, a President of the Board of war, came to Prince Kung, and handed him a copy of a memorial, which had already been presented, in which he (Ch'eng-ying) was accused of embezzling certain monies, producing at the same time two parcels of gold coin which he begged Prince Kung to receive. On Prince Kung peremptorily refusing, Ch'eng-ying prostrated himself before him and urgently implored his acceptance, explaining that the gold was not intended as a bribe but as a present, he being aware that the Prince's revenues were not in accordance with his high rank. Prince Kung memorializes, recapitulating the above circumstances, and requesting that Ch'eng-ying should be punished. The Emperor in reply applauds Prince Kung's integrity, expresses his surprise at Ch'eng-ying's daring, degrades him, and orders investigation of his whole previous career.

Kwang, Governor-General of Hupei and Hunan, memorializes, requesting that those who assisted in the defence of Wu-ch'ang-fu last year should be rewarded.

SILK ROBBERY BY IMPERIAL SOLDIERS.

We have been furnished with an account of an attack made by the Imperialist soldiery on some silk boats belonging to Messrs. Maniquet & Co., at a station called Tsao-poo-tung, upon the Wong-poo river, to the south-east of Song-kiong, about 6 leagues from Shang-hai by the river, in the direction of Sing-poo.

On the 10th inst., about 5½ P.M., the boats came in sight of this station, and when about 800 to 900 yards from it the crews were alarmed by a cannon shot, which fell in close proximity to the boats; 10 of these (14 forming the convoy) immediately stopped, while the person in charge of the whole in the remaining boat went forward to make himself known. In the meantime a second cannon shot was heard and the ball fell into the river a few feet from the boat, which latter, having arrived within 50 yards of the station was fired upon a third time—this time with grape shot. It was now thought advisable to stop and the boat anchored close to the river bank. Other shots were heard when the person in charge, along with three Europeans and M. Montagneux, a French Missionary, landed for the purpose of proceeding to the battery of three guns, built on the banks, which still continued firing. Being stopped by a creek, they were about half an hour reaching their destination. Having at length reached the fort, they were recognised and their passports examined, including the one belonging to the missionary, which was signed by the Emperor at Pekin. They had settled themselves comfortably and one had commenced smoking his pipe, when two more cannon shots gave them to understand that the soldiers had made a rush on the boats with the intention of plundering them; and the party having made all the haste possible to reach their boats, when they saw from 25 to 30 small boats with 200 of these fellows in them taking out the bales of silk, and out of 215, by the time the party reached their boats, not one was left. Being too few in number they could not prevent the pillage. In each boat the party was commanded by a chief. About the same time, the head chief, named Dzen, arrived and desired the owners to take back their silk, which they did and found 43 bales missing as well as two of the boats. They were also robbed of a quantity of other goods, such as native cloth, &c., clothes, arms, money, &c., and their total loss they value at Tls. 22,000. The party got back to Shanghai about half-past eleven that night and laid a complaint with the French Consul.

On the morning of the 17th, Admiral Protet proceeded with the Feiloong and two gun-boats—having a few troops on board—up the river to the place where this scene took place, for the purpose of obtaining the restitution of the silk. The expedition arrived at Tsao-poo-tung about 3 P.M., and they immediately seize, the three principal chiefs, Dzen and Len being of the number. These men are now prisoners on board H.I.M.S Forte; and we understand that M. Edan the French Consul has represented the outrage and robbery officially to the Taoutai.

NANKING.

From a Correspondent.

The general tranquillity which has prevailed in this realm since our arrival here was somewhat, though not much disturbed, by an abrupt advance of the Yaos upon a place a short distance below the creek, three days back. On the morning of the 6th, towards daylight a heavy cannonading was heard in the direction of the creek, which was maintained without intermission up to the hour of 9 or half-past 9 o'clock. The rebels were in a state of alarm, though batteries were manned and a black flag, indicating an order for dispatch of troops, was hoisted on Liang's look-out. The second in command Hsiao—who took special care to change his conspicuous yellow cap usually worn for a black one, that he might stand no chance of being singled out by an Imp—at the head of a chosen force of valiant warriors issued out at an early hour, with the evident and full intention of giving battle to the Yaos and ultimately causing the troublesome pests to retire. His force consisted of a mixed rabble of standard bearers, and the rear guard was composed of boys equipped with matchlocks, and whose respective ages varied from 7 to 15 years. Such a chosen band of heroes was this. Hsiao returned home, at 5 o'clock with his victorious battalion without having had the opportunity of inflecting serious harm on the Imps. The cause of the firing is said to have been in consequence of the advance of an imperialist fleet on a plundering expedition, and their having come up with some rebel gun-boats which fired on them. The action was then carried on between both parties, and the result was that success accrued to the Imperialists, who succeeded in capturing some (rebel) guard and trading boats, one of the number of which is said to have been full of pretty women. This was a valuable prize for them, and the women are said to have been the wives of rebel chiefs, who possibly may have been taken as well. The affair occurred at a place called Hua-shan, distant about seven miles from here. What the intention of the Imperialists was we don't know; the noise of the cannonading caused some imagination in our minds that an attack upon this place had no doubt been planned. Had such been the case we should have concurred in the propriety of the move, but as it appears, it was not. We must say that it is great folly for the Imperialists to assault any of the small places in the vicinity of the Capital, for no advantage is gained thereby. In fact it only tends to urge the rebels to fortify themselves additionally stronger each time that the Imperialists approach. When the opposite party do reach the Capital they will find an increased number of guns to baffle against; which, had they taken an earlier opportunity to come down upon the city itself, instead of rousing the small and unimportant places round here, would not have been there, and hence affording a greater chance of success, which they have now lost.

In the evening of the same day that the commotion took place, a fire occurred just near the floating bridge. The cause of it was owing to some chái or reeds having taken fire, or rather as is suspected, by a long-haired Imp having set fire to it, with some evil intent and preconcerted design in favour of the Imps. On the following morning towards the hour of 10 Liang for the second time, in pomp and majesty, delivered an oration on a platform erected in nearly the same spot as it stood before, when we then had the opportunity of becoming enlightened with his eloquence. After the usual preliminaries of drinking tea, &c., he said, "Let us praise Tien fu," and then a chorus of voices joined in with Tsan-mei tien-fu—let us praise the Heavenly Father and so forth.

The concourse of Heavenly children with their heads depressed and their eyes shut looking oh! so heavenly, filled the air with melody, and a great many of them appeared to think it great fun. Liang and Hsiao looked additionally heavenly; and the debauched, dried-up countenance of the former contrasted well with the full face and good countenance of the latter. After the singing had finished, the two parties moved down the aisle and took their places before a table at which they knelt and read from a sheet of yellow paper, the characters upon which we could not decipher, and the sound we could not hear, from being too great a distance off. At the termination of this saw, the return of Liang and brother Hsiao, who continued the amusement by their mounting the table, that the multitude of listeners might hear all they had to say. Liang then gave the shop-keepers certain admonitions, and, in making an allusion to the occurrence of the fire on the previous night, said that "the next time such a thing happened the people would not be allowed to cross the floating bridge; as it might be just as likely" continued he "that spies might purposely fire some reeds and that under cover of that, an Imperialist fleet would enter and create some havoc about the place. He also told them that they were not to billet any soldiers, either fresh from the city or from places outside. This order was given in consequence of recent desertions on the part of the rebels. A few days back about 10,000 went over to the Imperialists and they have now left Chiang-pu (hsien) where this occurred, and which is but a short distance from this, perfectly bare.

The matter is very easily explained, and the reason is sufficiently accounted for in the fact that there is an entire deficiency of the means of subsistence on the other side of the water, in consequence of the devastation caused by the rebels—who now have nothing more to plunder and hence nothing to subsist upon.

Such is the destitution that human flesh is readily devoured, and there is no compunction whatever upon capturing a way-farer in tying him up to a tree and slice by slice devouring him. We have this from reliable information and are certain of its truth, as those who have witnessed the enaction of these scenes detail them to us. Can we then have sympathy with those who give rise to such destitution as this, from the spoliation caused by them? Although we seem to be so unfavourably disposed towards these abominable ruffians, we never have spoken well of the opposite party. We are unable to do this, as we see such cowardice exhibited by the braves and Imperial soldiers, whom to behead would be more correct than slaying innocent people, but unfortunately the latter always seem to be the victims of the executioner's axe, and this is where we find fault. The distressing scenes at Shanghai of the poor and destitute being turned out of their homes and roaming about without knowing whither to turn their steps, must call forth the sympathy of most people, although it does not from some, whose selfish motives in the cause of gain prevents the influence of such a feeling on their minds. We wish heartily that this beautiful place were in other hands, for then would life be rendered more pleasant than it now is, and would be more sociable in very respect. The commonest necessary in which the Chinese live—rice—can only be procured in the coarsest state and that at a high price, and nothing else can be bought. The misery existing here is beyond conception. It is no uncommon thing to see a dead body, or a beggar lying by the road side just breathing his last from starvation.

But I find that I have left Liang in the middle of his discourse, or rather at the closing portion of it, as he had not much more to say for himself beyond delivering certain orders concerning what would be the operations in the event of an appearance of the Imps, &c.

Liang and Hsiao were then escorted home amid harmonious screams from the band—which I must tell you is Liang's own band, and composed of musicians whose ages range from 6 to 10 years.

Well I will not take up space by saying any more here concerning the rebels, but must say that the fact of a certain gentleman having had to run for his life, shows as plainly what they are, and with these words we will conclude by borrowing a quotation—"After this Mr. Editor, where go the arguments of your warlike self and correspondents."

THE TAIPING REBELS NEAR SHANGHAI.

On Saturday night about half-past ten great commotion was observed on the Pootung side of the river opposite Tong-ka-doo, amongst the Chinese on the river bank and among the junks anchored in the river. The screams of the affrighted inhabitants rent the air, and were heard down in the Settlement. Shortly afterwards the sound of cannonading startled the Foreign community, when many people moved in the direction of the firing without well knowing what was going on. It was afterwards ascertained that the Taiping rebels appeared in large numbers at the place mentioned, and had seized a number of junks with which they were endeavouring to make a bridge of boats, so as to enter the walled city from that point. Our gallant allies, the French, however, always on the alert, espied their object in the moonlight, and orders were given to the commanders of two gun-boats stationed there, to repel the sanguinary wretches. These two vessels immediately poured a volley of shot and shell amongst them and drove them from the river bank, and as they were seen retreating they were favoured with a little more of the same material, which we trust had its effect. Several war-junks also joined in the cannonading and as usual they kept blazing away the greater part of the night.

THE TAIPING REBELS AT PLOVER POINT.

On Thursday the 14th inst. an expedition consisting of H. M. S. Coromandel with the gun-boat Bouncer and Starling, having on board a company of small-arm-men from H. M. S. Imperieuse, a twelve-pounder field-piece from the same ship, Captain Holland's company of Royal marines from H. B. M. Consulate; Lieut Maud, R.E., and Mr. Alabaster, Interpreter—the whole under the command of Captain Willes, R.N., C.B.—left Shanghai for the purpose of recovering British property and releasing prisoners, recently captured by the Taiping rebels and pirates at Plover Point on the Yan-tsze.

The expedition anchored for the night about twelve miles below Plover Point, and early on the following morning reached it—the marines, field-piece, and small-arm-men, were landed immediately without opposition, just below the mouth of the 'Chong-chow-ho.' A deputation of two Headmen in full Taiping costume, came off and met them on their way to inquire the object of their visit. One of these men spoke English fluently.

The marines were pushed on and took possession of a building used as a Custom-house, and filled with arms and stores. On an inner door being burst open, out rushed not only the eleven missing men of Messrs. Fletcher's junk, but thirteen others who stated that they were part of the crews of two junks bound to Hankow, belonging to Messrs. Dent & Co. captured the preceding day. They threw themselves at the feet of the officers, overwhelmed with joy at their unexpected release.

On quarters being demanded to put up the British force for the night, the Headmen declared it to be impossible and out of the question, so they proceeded to select for themselves. Three large buildings standing together in an open space on the right bank of the Creek, and about a quarter of a mile from the bund of the Yang-tsze were chosen. On their moving forward, it proved to be the head-quarters of this band of Rebels—about seventy of whom were surprised in them—who then retreated, leaving behind two brass guns, and a host of banners. One of their chief officers was made a prisoner in an inner room. The men displayed great coolness and confidence and were most anxious to fight it out which they were with great difficulty restrained from doing by their captured leader, although it must have led to their utter extermination; they did not move until the soldiers were within twenty-yards of them when, cursing their chief, saying they "did not know how to retreat and give the foreigners the victory," they slowly retired across a bridge into the village of "Pang-kai-chiao."

On occupying the before-mentioned building, a large quantity of arms, six barrels of powder, and three cases containing upwards of a hundred tins of rifle powder were found and destroyed. The chiefs pointed out a portion of the cargo of Messrs. Fletcher's junk, and almost the whole of the remainder was found afterwards on searching a building a few hundred yards off. The missing Europeans they declared after much prevarication was murdered and thrown overboard in the fray when the junk was captured, and the linguist who they surrendered after some trouble, they stated was a prisoner at Choug-chow, a walled city twelve miles inland—the head quarters of their main body, which they said was two hundred thousand strong, but which is believed to amount to about five thousand.

The Great Official Tai-ping seal, a quantity of their correspondence and records, and a number of European documents were seized.

The Tai-pings—who did not appear to number more than a hundred and fifty—were nearly all Cantonese, and were mostly well armed and equipped, and were bold robust fellows. They were dressed in tight fitting red or green jackets, with red turbans and tight red trowsers, with flowing sashes round the waist, and looked altogether like Zouaves. On the following day the Marines marched seven miles into the country to reconnoitre. As they crossed the bridge and went up the main street, the rebels were seized with a panic and ran pell-mell out of the place, occasionally halting, drawing up round their banners, levelling their muskets and shouting and gesticulating fiercely. Following the winding of the creek, the large deserted village of May-lee with its remarkable seven-storied-pagoda was reached. This place must have contained twenty-thousand inhabitants. The people all through the country were wearing long hair, under compulsion, and were apparently reduced to the most abject state of slavery and wretchedness. The creek as far as this is navigable for large junks, has a depth of water of six feet at low tide. On returning by its right bank a row-boat with two guns was captured. The men re-embarked on Sunday evening, and the expedition left for Shanghai at daylight on Monday—having destroyed four armed war-boats, one in the course of equipment, and three other junks; liberating Messrs. Fletchers linguist and eleven of crew, as well as thirteen of the crews of Messrs. Dent; recovering nearly the whole of the valuable cargo belonging to the first-named firm; disarming the Rebel battery at the mouth of the creek; brought away five guns; destroyed a large quantity of arms and ammunition; crippled the resources and humbled the pride of these marauders, and imported to them a wholesome lesson on the danger of interfering with European trade, without bloodshed, or an accident of any description.

ATTACK UPON AND DEFEAT OF THE TAIPING REBELS NEAR SHANGHAI.

We have much satisfaction in reporting the success of an attack upon the rebel force infesting the Pootung side of the Wong-poo. It appears that information had reached the authorities here that a well-armed body of Taiping rebels had entrenched themselves at a large village named Chang-to-Chao some four or five miles down the river, with the evident intention of harrassing the city and Settlement from time to time, and retiring back upon this stronghold. The English and French naval commanders acceded to the wishes of the Imperialist authorities to aid Colonel Ward's contingent of disciplined Chinese to make a descent upon the place and drive the enemy away. Accordingly yesterday at daylight H. M. steamer Coromandel, with a party of marines and blue-jackets, and several French and Chinese vessels proceeded to the scene of action, landing their forces within a few miles of the village. The Chinese under command of Colonel Ward were 600 strong and marched boldly on Chang-to-Chao, attacking the rebels with vigour, who in return fought desperately. After a sharp resistance the rebels fled, leaving behind their killed and wounded.

The casualties among the attacking forces are stated to be 10 Chinese killed and 50 wounded, 1 French killed and 2 wounded, and 1 English wounded. A number of prisoners were taken, also villagers who had been pressed into the service of the Taipings.

The only addititional account we can give as yet, is that the Contest from Chefoo, in passing up the river came within sight of the rebels, and reported them to be about 30,000 or 40,000 strong. The name of the village where they were encamped is said to be Ko-yo. Between 800 and 900 rebels killed and wounded.
